

Blair's profound sensitivity to her surroundings has always been a driving force behind her pursuit of dreams and her mission to enhance various interior spaces. She was born and bred in the furniture capitol of the world, North Carolina.

Raised in and around downtown Charlotte, gave her access to culture, the arts and most importantly new and historical architecture to draw inspiration from. Myers Park High School, was her first opportunity to take Interior Design classes.

Her educational journey led her to the picturesque mountains of Western North Carolina, where she attended Western Carolina University and earned a four-year bachelor's degree in Interior Design. During her senior year, she distinguished herself by receiving the 'Most Creative Award' in her class.

While in college, Blair gained valuable experience working with two different builders in the Highlands and Cashiers area. In this capacity, she collaborated closely with contractors and clients to conceptualize design plans. She adeptly utilized AutoCAD for drafting plans for both new constructions and remodels. Blair also played a pivotal role in assisting clients in selecting materials and finishes, and she assumed the responsibilities of a project manager, ensuring that projects progressed smoothly and in accordance with the established plans and local building codes.

In 2007, Blair embarked on a new chapter in Jacksonville, where she joined Hugo's Fine Furniture & Interiors. This experience deepened her expertise in crafting custom upholstery, furniture, draperies and other soft goods

Throughout her Residential Design career, she has written Interior Design Blogs for a marketing company, based in Colorado. She wrote inspiring blog post about design trends, using and selecting materials and even how to design spaces. These blogs were published through retailers and used on their website for fresh, ever changing content. This allowed companies to interact and inspire their followers and particular sector of the Residential Design world.
